

Defending Against False Claims Act (FCA) Investigations

The False Claims Act (FCA) is the government's primary tool for combating fraud in programs like Medicare, Medicaid, and TRICARE. Because the FCA allows for treble damages and civil penalties exceeding $25,000 per claim, these are inherently high-stakes enforcement matters. Most cases begin with a "qui tam" lawsuit filed by a whistleblower, which can quickly escalate into a federal criminal investigation if the DOJ intervenes.

WHEN TO TAKE ACTION

You should contact a white collar crime lawyer immediately if:

- You receive a Civil Investigative Demand (CID) or subpoena: This indicates the government is actively investigating your billing or certification practices.
- You learn of a whistleblower (qui tam) complaint: Whistleblowers can receive 15–30% of the recovery, creating massive incentives for reports.
- You identify internal billing irregularities: Issues such as "upcoding" or improper documentation require immediate attention to prevent government enforcement.
- Federal agents request an interview: Never speak with investigators before consulting a criminal defense attorney.

HOW TO TAKE ACTION

When the government leverages the FCA, you need a defense team that understands how to negotiate from a position of strength.

- Retain Former Prosecutors: Dykema's team includes former federal prosecutors who have led these investigations from the inside. We know what federal authorities look for when deciding whether to intervene in a case.
- Launch a Privileged Internal Investigation: We conduct thorough internal corporate investigations to assess the validity of allegations and identify the scope of exposure.
- Negotiate with the DOJ: Our attorneys use their "insider" insight to resolve high-stakes FCA litigation through advocacy, often before a federal indictment is ever considered.
- Audit and Remediate: We help reinforce your corporate compliance programs to demonstrate good-faith cooperation and prevent future liability.

Contact Dykema's White Collar Defense and Government Investigations practice today for a confidential consultation.

Mark Chutkow

Member, Bloomfield Hills
248-203-0715
mchutkow@dykema.com

Jennifer Beidel

Member, Bloomfield Hills
248-203-0506
jbeidel@dykema.com

Leigha Simonton

Member, Dallas
214-462-6444
lsimonton@dykema.com