Daniel Stern and Ricardo Vielledent Speak on Recent EEOC, TWC, OSHA, NLRB Activity at Weslaco Seminar

August 26, 2013

Nothing Has Changed, but Nothing is the Same

Though there has been little or no legislative activity in recent years specifically affecting employers, it has not stopped administrative agencies from challenging employers by aggressively enforcing existing laws and “reinterpreting” old regulations. This includes the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission’s issuing guidance on arrests and convictions that, while not game changing, emphasized the new focus of the agency’s efforts: to challenge how employers make employment decisions. The National Labor Relations Board, with its implementation of new regulations and newfound interpretations under the National Labor Relations Act, remains the most dramatic actor. However, the U.S. Supreme Court has issued two new rulings that are viewed as positive for employers.

Topics to be addressed include:

- Prominent cases for the last 18 months, both state and federal
- Activity of the EEOC, TWC, OSHA, NLRB and others
- Legislative activity
- Things to consider to adapt to this activity
