Lauren Evers is an Associate in the Business Litigation practice in Dykema's Bloomfield Hills office. Ms. Evers' practice involves all aspects of real estate disputes, including general real estate litigation, easement acquisition, subordinations, and condemnation of agricultural, residential and commercial property. She also works with and advises municipalities, landowners, and businesses that are considering expanding or acquiring new locations, in zoning and land use matters.

Ms. Evers is also a key member of a team of Dykema attorneys that work to assist clients in the energy industry including telecommunication carriers, utilities specializing in the transmission of high voltage electricity and those specializing in the transport of liquid petroleum products, to build new infrastructure and to help ensure safe and reliable continued service.

In addition to her real estate practice, Ms. Evers also represents clients in the automotive industry and other industries in commercial disputes involving supplier relationships and contract disagreements.

Ms. Evers graduated magna cum laude from Notre Dame Law School, where she served as Executive Production Editor of the Notre Dame Journal of College and University Law and was active with the Small Business Pro Bono Clinic. While in law school, Ms. Evers interned with the Illinois Attorney General's Office and also previously interned with the Cook County State's Attorney's Office.
