Dykema’s Antitrust and Trade Regulation Practice Earns Top 100 Ranking in Law360 Survey

February 15, 2012

CHICAGO—The law firm of Dykema is pleased to announce that its Antitrust and Trade Regulation practice group was named to the Law360 Competition 100, a list of the 100 largest Competition practices in the U.S., as identified in Law360’s annual survey. The survey is conducted among law firms with 100 or more lawyers as well as select boutique firms.

Dykema’s Antitrust and Trade Regulation group is an interdisciplinary team that draws upon lawyers from the firm's litigation, corporate, government policy and intellectual property practices. As reflected in this year’s Law360 report, Dykema ranks as the 57th largest Competition practice in the U.S., and the largest of any firm based in Michigan, where Dykema was founded 86 years ago.

Howard Iwrey, co-leader of Dykema’s Antitrust and Trade Regulation practice, notes, “With antitrust and trade regulation issues being discussed on a daily basis in so many corporate boardrooms, our inclusion in this year’s Law360 list testifies not only to our strength, but to the value our clients place on experienced counsel in this discipline.”

Dykema’s Antitrust and Trade Regulation practice spans a broad array of industries worldwide. The firm advises clients in such realms as automotive, finance, health care, sports, computer hardware and software, military, medical devices, consumer products, transportation and energy.
